This course offers students enrolled in the MFA in Creative Writing program the opportunity for rigorous study of contemporary master works in a particular genre. Designed to provide students with the opportunity to deeply investigate contemporary works for the required thesis reading list, this course counts as one of the literature requirements for the MFA degree. The course is best suited for students in the second year of the program; however, any MFA student may register. The course cannot be repeated for credit.

Prerequisites: Graduate standing and permission of instructor

ENGL 682 Literature for Writers (3 Credit Hours)

This course is designed to guide MFA creative writing students in an investigation of the historical works for the required thesis reading lists. Most course work will be individualized and flexible. Students in all genres will define the literary traditions they are operating in and study some of the foundational texts that inform those traditions.

Prerequisites: Graduate standing and permission of instructor

ENGL 683 Literary Editing and Publishing (3 Credit Hours)

This course is for MFA Creative Writing students, and is meant to provide basic concepts of literary editing and publishing, theoretical and practical frameworks, and hands-on/internship types of experiences managing/reading/editing for the MFA program's literary journal, Barely South Review. This course can count once toward elective credit in the MFA curriculum and may not be repeated for credit.

Prerequisites: Students must be in good graduate standing and must have earned at least 9 credit hours in the MFA program

Pre- or corequisite: This course is a corequisite for actual internship work in the journal, though students who take this course are NOT automatically guaranteed a staff position in the journal

ENGL 685 Writing Research (3 Credit Hours)

This course explores current methods and methodologies in writing research. Students will design and carry out original studies of academic, professional, or personal writing as it is practiced in classrooms, work places, and other settings.

Prerequisites: 6 graduate credits in English

ENGL 686 Introduction to Rhetoric and Writing Studies (3 Credit Hours)

This course presents key concepts, principles, traditions, and conversations that define the field of rhetoric and composition, surveying major texts, movements, issues, and methodologies. This course is designed primarily to prepare students for advanced courses in professional writing; however, it will also benefit any student who is interested in gaining insights about language, knowledge, and power from the perspective of rhetoric.

ENGL 687 Colloquium for Teachers of English (3 Credit Hours)

This course discusses theories of teaching, writing and literature and helps explore the challenges facing 21st century educators in terms of finding ways to reach the 21st century student. The course investigates ways to help students understand the inherent value of reading and writing. Additionally, the course looks at pedagogical models and examines how they can be applied to individual areas of expertise. May be repeated for credit when topic varies.

ENGL 694 Thesis Colloquium (3 Credit Hours)

All MFA students are required to take ENGL 694 before their final semester. The course brings together all genres in a collaborative focus in which students discuss specific thesis projects, format requirements, publishing opportunities and reading lists for the 10-page prefatory essay required for their defense.

Prerequisites: May be taken after 24 graduate hours have been completed

ENGL 695 Topics (1-3 Credit Hours)

The advanced study of a selected topic in English. Topics courses will appear in the course schedule and will be more fully described in information distributed to all academic advisors.

ENGL 696 Independent Readings (3 Credit Hours)

Designed for the advanced student (15-20 hours) who wants to study in-depth a sharply focused area of literature, linguistics, or pedagogy. Before registering for the course, the student must make out a prospectus with the instructor and submit it. No graduate student is permitted to take more than two independent readings courses.

ENGL 697 Portfolio Preparation (3 Credit Hours)

Preparatory course designed to assist students in the development of a professional or teaching portfolio. Students will consult regularly with their committee.

Prerequisites: 21 credit hours of course work completed

ENGL 698 Thesis Research (1-9 Credit Hours)

Preparatory course designed to assist students in the writing of a thesis. Students will consult regularly with the faculty.

Prerequisites: Instructor approval and completion of 30 hours of course work required

ENGL 699 Thesis (1-9 Credit Hours)

Writing of the creative thesis.

Prerequisites: Instructor approval and completion of 30 hours of course work required

ENGL 701 Texts and Technologies (3 Credit Hours)

Tracing the development of writing technologies from Ancient Greece through contemporary blogs and wikis, this course focuses on the relationships between a text's physical qualities and its composition, production, and reception.

ENGL 703 Technologies of the Book (3 Credit Hours)

This course explores the history and future of the book, print technology, the way books are made, shared, collected, preserved, and discarded, and the status of the book within larger information systems—archives, libraries, and private collections—in the digital age. How do we reconceive the book and its place in the increasingly digital cultural archive?

ENGL 705 Discourse and Rhetoric Across Cultures (3 Credit Hours)

The course is a survey of language use both within and across cultures. Topics include relationships between language and conceptualization (linguistic relativity); description and interpretation of linguistic and rhetorical patterns; the organization, expression, and analysis of cultural meaning (e.g. frames, cultural models, narratives); relational aspects of language use; and literacy practices.

ENGL 706 Visual Rhetoric and Document Design (3 Credit Hours)

This course focuses on how visual elements work within different types of documents. Theory and research in visual rhetoric and technical communication will be used to develop models for how people process visual information in a variety of social and cultural contexts.

ENGL 710 Major Debates in English Studies (3 Credit Hours)

This course introduces students to the principal questions and concerns of the field and includes a comparison and contrast of the specialties in English, including how they form and address key issues.

Prerequisites: Reserved for degree seeking students in the PhD in English program

ENGL 715 Technical Communication Theories and Practices (3 Credit Hours)

This course surveys the history of technical communication and explores competing theories and research methodologies in the field. The tensions between workplace practices, technical communication scholarship, and technical communication pedagogy will also be explored.

ENGL 717 Teaching Professional and Technical Writing (3 Credit Hours)

This course introduces students to the field of technical communication by way of classroom practice with the goal of professionalizing students as teachers of technical communication (or technical writing). Students are asked to design undergraduate course materials and projects, which will be informed by exploration of the extensive boundaries of the field and critical consideration of the most pressing questions facing technical communication scholars and the most common problems facing technical communication practitioners today.

Prerequisites: ENGL 715 recommended

ENGL 720 Pedagogy and Instructional Design (3 Credit Hours)

Students in this course will be prepared to develop pedagogical plans, teach and assess writing in four instructional areas: advanced and professional writing courses, writing across the curriculum, workplace instruction, and distributed learning. New pedagogical tools, especially computer-based technologies, will be taught, analyzed and tested.

ENGL 721 Compositions as Applied Rhetoric (3 Credit Hours)

Students will examine how the field of rhetoric has shaped composition pedagogy in the United States from its inception at Harvard to postmodern possibilities of today's writing classroom.

Prerequisites: 3 credits of a graduate level rhetoric or composition course or instructor's permission

ENGL 722 Multilingualism and Writing Instruction (3 Credit Hours)

Examines the social and institutional contexts that shape the expectations placed on writing instruction, the cross-cultural issues that affect how multilingual students compose English texts, and the curricular strategies for designing assignments and assessing multilingual writers' work.

ENGL 724 Online Writing Instructions (3 Credit Hours)

Students will learn how to negotiate the intersection between online instruction and writing pedagogy by exploring and interrogating the ways that various means of course mediation shapes the literacy pedagogy an instructor can develop. ENGL 664 is recommended as a prerequisite.

ENGL 725 Scholarly Editing and Textual Scholarship (3 Credit Hours)

Surveys the theory and practice of scholarly editing, of the physical description of texts as material artifacts, and of the historical and social contextualization of texts as material artifacts. Focus is on texts produced in manuscripts and print, but consideration is given to oral texts and digital texts.

Prerequisites: Instructor approval required

ENGL 727 London Calling: 20th and 21st Century British Literature (3 Credit Hours)

Studies of major poets, dramatists and prose writers. Some attention will be given to the movements, trends, forces, and ideas of the period. The course coheres around a pertinent theme, historical moment, genre, or theoretical inquiry.

ENGL 728 Eighteenth Century British Literature (3 Credit Hours)

A study of the literature written in the British Isles from the "Glorious Revolution" of 1688 until 1800, focusing on how the flowering of satire and the emergence of new literary forms such as periodical journalism, the novel, and "mock heroic" poetry interacted with the growth of distinctly modern institutions and philosophies such as a free, commercial press, market capitalism, colonialism, political radicalism, and industrialism.

ENGL 730 The Digital Humanities (3 Credit Hours)

Taking historical, cultural, and theoretical views, this course bridges literary studies with new media. How has technology historically affected literature and culture? Can the democratization of information accelerate literary development? Topics will include digital archives, intellectual property in the information age, and electronic textuality.

ENGL 732 Digital Activisms (3 Credit Hours)

An exploration of the diffuse and disparate methods and practices of contemporary digital activism.

ENGL 734 Theories of Networks (3 Credit Hours)

An increasing amount of scholarship in English studies focuses on the networked interactions between texts and other texts, people, technologies, etc. To account for these various types of relationships between different types of objects a number of theories of networks have emerged. This course considers key theoretical discussions that work to define nodes, relationships between them, and how networks emerge, grow, and/or dissolve.

ENGL 735 Postcolonial Literature and Theory (3 Credit Hours)

An examination of the discourse of postcolonial critical theory literature produced in postcolonial, diasporic and global contexts.

Prerequisites: Any equivalent graduate level critical theory course or instructor permission

ENGL 736 (Against) World Literature (3 Credit Hours)

Analyzes world literature's disciplinary affordances and limitations and considers world literature's tensions with comparative literature. Students examine a theme, genre, or other literary topic as it appears in the literature of several countries. All works are assigned in English translation if not originally written in English.

ENGL 737 Narratology (3 Credit Hours)

A study of the various theories that have emerged since the early twentieth century about the form, history, and cultural significance of narrative as a specific discursive mode. Theories will range from structuralist approaches to narrative elements like plot, perspective, and voice, to politically-engaged theories like Marxist, Feminist, and Queer narratology, as well as to more recent theories such as Storyworld/Possible Worlds theory. The focus will be on linguistic, “literary” narratives, but narratives in other media (such as film or graphic novels) and other genres (such as historiography) will be also be studied.

ENGL 740 Empirical Research Methods and Project Design (3 Credit Hours)

This course focuses on the theory and design of empirical research conducted in academic and nonacademic settings. Students will examine the methodological complexities of several different approaches and conduct empirical research projects in English studies.

Prerequisites: Reserved for degree seeking students in the PhD in English program
