Counseling Graduate Program

The Old Dominion University M.S.Ed. in counseling includes two concentration areas: Clinical Mental Health Counseling or School Counseling. Clinical Mental Health track graduates meet the educational requirements to pursue the LPC credential in Virginia, and School Counseling track graduates meet requirements for the Virginia Licensed School Counselor credential. Graduates of the School Counseling track who complete electives in diagnosis, addictions, and family dynamics can also meet requirements for both the LPC and the Licensed School Counselor credentials.

The Counseling program also offers an Education Specialist (Ed.S.) degree for those seeking to re-specialize beyond their Master’s training in Counseling, and this degree can be tailored to meet the LPC or Licensed School Counselor educational requirements. The Ed.S. degree extends counseling knowledge and skills for individuals who already hold master’s degrees in counseling. The Ed.S. degree also provides core master’s level counseling coursework for individuals who have master’s degrees in closely related fields (e.g., psychology, special education) who wish to become counselors.

The Ph.D. in Education with a concentration in Counseling prepares graduates to become counselor educators, clinical supervisors, scholars, and leaders in a variety of professional settings.

The master’s degree program offers a curriculum that emphasizes the following core components: professional orientation and ethical practice; social and cultural diversity; human growth and development; career development; helping relationships; group work; assessment; and research and program evaluation. In addition, the school counseling concentration includes courses in school climate and culture, counseling children and adolescents, professional issues, and program development. The clinical mental health counseling concentration includes courses in substance abuse counseling, family dynamics, diagnosis and psychopathology, and clinical supervision.

As part of the program’s mission, a commitment to social justice, cultural inclusivity, and reducing inequities and oppression is infused throughout coursework. Required field placement experiences (practicum, internship, and observation hours) involve work in counseling settings where learners apply the knowledge, attitudes, awareness, and skills developed during their coursework. Prior to any placement in the field for observation or practicum/internship all students are required to complete a background check. These are handled by the Teacher Education Services and Advising Office. Instructions can be found on their web page (http://education.odu.edu/chs/academics/counseling). The admissions process, the use of experiential and didactic learning approaches, supervision requirements, and ongoing comprehensive review and evaluation of students ensures that all graduates possess the academic and personal characteristics necessary to be effective counselors.

The clinical mental health counseling concentration prepares graduate students for careers in community mental health settings, college counseling centers, hospital-based behavioral health programs, the criminal justice field, veterans' mental health, and private practice. The clinical mental health counseling concentration provides grounding in evidence-based practice, assessment and diagnosis, the role of the counselor in health care, and client and population-centered advocacy. The school counseling concentration prepares graduates to act as systems-change agents throughout K-12 settings in order to address the academic and developmental needs of children, adolescents, and youth. Through the use of experiential and didactic instruction graduates from the school counseling concentration learn to think systemically, lead effectively, and collaborate with other professionals and stakeholder groups in schools as well as communities. As advocates for children, adolescents, and youth, graduates are encouraged to embrace the belief that school counselors are a major force in closing the achievement gap and that changes in students and programs will be observable, measurable, and impactful.

The Ph.D. – education with a counseling concentration prepares individuals for employment as counselor educator faculty members in colleges and universities and as clinicians and leaders in counseling settings in colleges, community mental health agencies, private practices, and schools or school districts. This program provides doctoral students with the skills to supervise other counselors, teach counseling skills, conduct scholarly research, lead organizations, and create new knowledge in the field of counseling. Learners in the Ph.D. program are actively mentored to develop their competency in specific topics through presentations, extra-curricular research, and service-leadership to the Counseling field.

The master’s degree program (including the two concentrations) and the counseling concentration within the Ph.D. program are accredited by the Council for the Accreditation of Counseling and Related Programs (CACREP). CACREP does not accredit education specialist degree programs. Objectives for programs offered and other important program information can be found in the program handbooks which are located on the program web pages at http://education.odu.edu/chs/academics/counseling.
