Communication Disorders and Special Education

Web Site: http://www.odu.edu/cdse

Stacie Raymer, Chair

The Department of Communication Disorders and Special Education is dedicated to preparing professionals to serve in educational and clinical settings as well as community agencies. The department fulfills this mission through its undergraduate and graduate degrees as well as licensure programs. An undergraduate degree is offered in Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology. A graduate degree program is offered in Speech-Language Pathology and graduate degree programs and licensure are offered in Special Education. Special education students may emphasize either a combination of learning disabilities, emotional and behavioral disorders, and mental retardation, or early childhood special education and severe disabilities.

Interdisciplinary Studies Undergraduate Preparation

Undergraduate students who are interested in Special Education can become eligible for licensure to teach Special Education through the College of Arts and Letters Interdisciplinary Studies Teacher Preparation program. See the Interdisciplinary Studies section of this Catalog or the web site for additional information, admission, continuance, exit and assessment requirements, program requirements and curriculum of study: http://al.odu.edu/ids/tprep.

Bachelor of Science—Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology Major

Stacie Raymer, Program Director

The undergraduate program in speech-language pathology and audiology is designed to provide students with the academic experiences needed to understand normal processes involved in speech and language abilities, identify speech, language and hearing disorders, and introduce students to clinical procedures for assessment and treatment of communication disorders. The minimum number of hours required for the degree is 120 credits. Consistent with national accreditation standards, bachelor’s level students are not eligible for employment as a speech-language pathologist or audiologist in any professional setting. Therefore, the undergraduate program at Old Dominion University serves as a feeder program to the master’s degree program in speech-language pathology, which prepares students for employment through advanced course work, on-campus practica, and off-campus practica. The undergraduate degree also prepares students to apply to graduate audiology programs that are offered at other universities and other professional graduate programs.
