Communication Disorders and Special Education

Jonna Bobzien, Chair

The Department of Communication Disorders and Special Education is dedicated to preparing professionals to serve in educational and clinical settings as well as community agencies. The department fulfills this mission through its undergraduate and graduate degrees as well as licensure programs. Two undergraduate degrees are offered in the department: B.S. in Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology; and B.S. in Special Education.

Bachelor of Science—Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology

Dr. Anne Michalek, Undergraduate Program Director

The undergraduate program in speech-language pathology and audiology is designed to provide students with the academic experiences needed to understand normal processes involved in speech, language, and hearing abilities, and to identify communication disorders. Classes also introduce students to clinical procedures for assessment and treatment of communication disorders. The minimum number of hours required for the degree is 120 credits. Consistent with national certification standards, bachelor's level students are not eligible for employment as a speech-language pathologist or audiologist in any professional setting. Therefore, the undergraduate program at Old Dominion University serves as a feeder program to apply to the graduate program in speech-language pathology where licensure and certification standards will be met. The undergraduate degree also prepares students to apply to graduate audiology programs that are offered at other universities and other professional programs. The degree is 120 credits. Consistent with national certification standards, bachelor's level students are not eligible for employment as a speech-language pathologist or audiologist in any professional setting.
