IS 716 Theories of Comparative Sociopolitical Studies (3 Credit Hours)
The fundamental goal of the course is to provide the theoretical basis for subsequent coursework and research in the comparative and regional studies track. To achieve this goal, this seminar examines major theories and debates in comparative social and political studies based on extensive and intensive literature review.

IS 717 World Population and Development (3 Credit Hours)
This seminar discusses population processes and their connections to socioeconomic development. A nontechnical course, the goal is to introduce students to the major concerns and issues in population and current debates over the role of population in sustainable development. It will provide students with a systematic but critical review of research findings and issues in various areas of population and development.

IS 720 Research Seminar in Global Security (3 Credit Hours)
The research seminar investigates the profound changes in international security brought about by the end of the Cold War with a specific focus on the role of nuclear weapons. The primary purpose of the seminar is to promote research into the global aspects of the nuclear issue and to enhance understanding of the relationship between nuclear control and the New World Order.

IS 721 New World Order: Chaos and Coherence (3 Credit Hours)
This course explores ideas of order and how they apply to international politics over space and time. Using theories of international relations, students look at how states and other international actors shape the principles and practices on which order is built and how these actors navigate among the many challenges and disruptions that arise. Specifically, students study the international liberal order, power shifts, and technological innovations, including cyber, and the rise and demise of norms in the international system.

IS 722 Democracy and International Relations (3 Credit Hours)
An examination of the relationship between democratic politics, democratic ideals, and international relations. Subjects covered will include trends and processes of democratization and their implications for international relations, the distinctiveness of democratic states in their international behavior, the impact of the international environment on the internal politics of democratic states, and the problems of democracy in global governance.

IS 723 Advanced Statistical Techniques in International Studies (3 Credit Hours)
Introduces the use of advanced statistical techniques for the analysis of social science data. The central objective is to give students a working understanding of multivariate analysis, with a particular focus on the techniques and problems associated with multiple regression, causal analysis, and limited dependent variable maximum likelihood models.
Prerequisites: IS 600 or equivalent

IS 724 International & Comparative Political Economy (3 Credit Hours)
This class focuses on core theories of international political economy, including international trade, international finance, foreign direct investment, the role of multinational corporations, and the subfield of comparative political economy. Students are introduced to the two main paradigms of contemporary economics, Keynesianism and Hayekian monetarism.
Students study labor markets and industrial relations, welfare states, the domestic regulation of finance, the politics of debt, inequality, and the role of the state.

IS 725 Politics of the Middle East (3 Credit Hours) Explores the international relations of the Middle East from World War I to the present. Examines the origins of the Arab-Israeli and Persian Gulf Wars and their modern dimensions. Examines the role of oil, outside powers and religion.

IS 728 Ghosts of French Colonialization (3 Credit Hours)
An analysis of France ex-colonies as they moved from colonization and decolonization to independence. An overview of political, historical, cinematic, and literary texts with a focus on France’s relationship with its ex-colonies, and its ex-colonies’ struggles in a post-decolonized world up until contemporary times.

IS 731 Media & Migration (3 Credit Hours)
This class explores the complex relationships between immigration, globalization, nationalism, and media at the turn of the 21st Century.
Students distinguish between different forms of migration and experiences of travel. It explores how media has depicted immigration processes and shaped public attitudes toward different immigrant groups. It also investigates how first- and second-generation immigrant populations consume and produce media that both shape and are shaped by transnational identity formations.

IS 732 National Identity in a Global Age (3 Credit Hours)
This course will focus on narratives of national identity in the age of globalization. Seminal works of cultural criticism, philosophy, and political philosophy will shed light on the complex nature of national identity construction in the contemporary world.

IS 734 U.S. Grand Strategy (3 Credit Hours)
This course offers a thorough exploration into the subject of U.S. grand strategy. It confronts debates over the definition and usefulness of grand strategy, examines variations across the history of U.S. grand strategy and among current visions for U.S. grand strategy, and analyzes subjects of core concern to U.S. grand strategy.

IS 735 International Relations of the Middle East (3 Credit Hours)
The purpose of this course is to help the student understand, evaluate and analyze key features of the international relations of the Middle East.
Major issues covered include the historical background of the Middle East, primarily from World War I; Islam and Islamism; Zionism and Israel; Arab nationalism and pan-Arabism; the Arab-Israeli conflict in its historical and contemporary context; the Persian Gulf wars; global oil dynamics; the foreign policy of key regional states; the role of outside powers in the region, especially the United States; and major issues including democratization, WMD, and the Arab Spring.
Prerequisites: Instructor or Director approval

IS 738 European Politics (3 Credit Hours)
The course explores the politics of Europe, focusing on four core themes:
the political economy and the travails of the single currency, the question of immigration, legitimacy and democracy, and the changing political landscape. Students will familiarize themselves with the European Union and its institutions, as well as such themes as populism, the decline of centrist political parties and economic stagnation.

IS 740 Political Economy of Development (3 Credit Hours)
This seminar examines alternate theoretical perspectives on development.
These perspectives are then employed to understand contemporary political and economic changes in the developing world, including the consolidation of democratic governance and the liberalization of domestic economics.

IS 741 Globalization and Social Change in the World System (3 Credit Hours)
This course is intended to first identify the distinguishing characteristics of globalization. It then attempts to examine its implications on a number of critical issues, including the future of democracy, income distribution and ethnic, class, and gender relations.

IS 748 Gender and Globalization (3 Credit Hours) Studies systems of global restructuring as they impact women throughout the globe. Migration, international development, and transnational activism will be focal themes, explored across a variety of national contexts.

IS 750 France’s Decolonized Legacy: Africa, Asia, the Caribbean, Quebec (3 Credit Hours)
An analysis of France’s ex-colonies as they moved from colonization and decolonization to independence. An overview of political, historical, cinematic, and literary texts with a focus on France’s relationship with its ex-colonies, and its ex-colonies’ struggles in a post-decolonized world.
Prerequisites: Approval of instructor or director

IS 751 Ethnic Conflict in the Emerging Global Order (3 Credit Hours)
Using different case studies, this course investigates the most important internal and external factors that cause ethnic conflicts. It also examines different mechanisms that help resolve or mitigate such conflicts.
IS 752 Research Seminar in International Studies: Refugees (3 Credit Hours)
This is a graduate-level seminar focusing on the refugee movement from a global perspective. The goals are to provide a critical and realistic understanding of the refugee phenomenon and to explain why the refugees tend to follow some identifiable paths, and why they sometimes return and sometimes do not. Discussion will be centered on the causes and consequences of refugee flow, and the roles the more developed countries can play in helping solve the problem.

IS 755 Conflict and Violence in Modern Africa (3 Credit Hours)
This course will confront the theme of conflict and violence in Africa since the mid-20th century. It will explore the reasons behind the level of violent conflicts in the continent today, seek to understand their larger significance, and explore ideas for conflict resolution and prevention. (cross listed with HIST 755)

IS 760 International Cultural Studies: History, Theory and Application (3 Credit Hours)
Course analyzes culture in the context of material conditions in which it is produced, disseminated, controlled and practiced. Theoretical application of cultural studies will include developing familiarity with key foundational theories, terminologies, and critical thinking.

IS 762 Game Theory (3 Credit Hours)
Game theory uses mathematical models, empirical investigation, and simulations in an effort to explain simple and complex strategic interactions among individuals, states, groups, and species. This course teaches the tools of game theory, with a focus on applications in international relations and political science.

IS 765 Agent-Based Modeling and Simulation for International Studies (3 Credit Hours)
An introduction to complex systems theory and to the application of agent-based modeling technologies to a variety of social systems.

IS 770 Transnational Media Practices (3 Credit Hours)
Course examines the key roles played by media technologies in implementing and promoting international development programs, as well as some of the concerns these initiatives have raised in terms of media literacy, cultural sovereignty, and information access.

IS 772 Modeling Global Events (3 Credit Hours)
This course introduces modeling and simulation as a tool for expanding one’s understanding of events that have shaped the global environment of the 21st century. The course will first provide a broad look at international politics through a review of select international incidents, military interventions, and homeland security issues. Second, select topics from these categories will serve as case studies to facilitate representing those events with the application of modeling, simulation, and visualization. Understanding how modeling and simulation can provide another method of analysis allows students to delve deeper into their understanding of “what happened” and to explore their conception of “what if.”

Prerequisites: Approval of instructor or director

IS 790 Advanced Seminar Conflict & Cooperation (3 Credit Hours)
This course explores debates in the field of Security Studies, their relevance to creating knowledge, discourse, consensus and critique, and the development of diverse research agendas.

IS 794 Seminar in Thesis and Dissertation Preparation (3 Credit Hours)
Prepares students to research, formulate and write thesis and dissertation prospectuses.

Prerequisites: permission of the director

IS 795 Topics in International Studies (1-3 Credit Hours)
The advanced study and discussion of selected (titled) topics not offered on a regular basis.

IS 796 Selected Topics in International Studies (1-3 Credit Hours)
The advanced study of selected topics in an interdisciplinary manner which will permit small groups of qualified students to work on subjects of mutual interest. Due to their specialized nature, the course may not be offered regularly.

IS 801 Global Change and American Foreign Policy (3 Credit Hours)
This research seminar examines the transformation of the U.S. role in the world in the global context of the 20th Century and since September 2001.

IS 802 Approaches to Collective Security (3 Credit Hours)
This seminar explores the origins of the idea of collective security, examines the attempts to organize international security collectively and assesses possibilities and opportunities for collective security arrangements after the Cold War.

IS 803 Ethics and International Relations (3 Credit Hours)
The focus of this research seminar will be on the role of normative ideas in international relations. Students will be introduced to the growing literature on normative approaches to international relations as well as the traditional literature on the practical and philosophical problems of ethical action in the relations of states. Although a number of policy applications will be considered, the primary focus will be on the theoretical incorporation of normative ideas into our understanding of state action in the anarchic international environment.
